

Contribution ID: 116

Type: Poster

The options of spent fuel reprocessing and partition in the frame of future advanced fuel cycles in Russia

Thursday, 27 June 2019 10:45 (15 minutes)

The paper presents the main Russian concepts and projects in the field of spent nuclear fuel and high level liquid waste reprocessing. A new concept of partition was proposed to minimize waste requiring deep geological disposal. The key problems and tasks of the concept are discussed.

Do you wish to enter the YGE SFM19 Challenge?

Country or International Organization

Russian Federation

Primary authors: Dr TKACHENKO, Liudmila (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia); Dr RIABKOV, Dmitrii (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia); Prof. ZILBERMAN, Boris (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia); Dr SMIRNOV, Igor (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia); Dr GOLETSKII, Nikolai (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia); Ms KENF, Ekaterina (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia); Dr KUDINOV, Alexander (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia)

Presenter: Dr TKACHENKO, Liudmila (The State Atomic Energy Corporation ROSATOM, JSC Khlopin Radium Institute, Saint-Peterburg, Russia)

Session Classification: Track 5 Poster Session

Track Classification: Track 5: Impacts of advanced nuclear energy systems on the back-end of the fuel cycle