

Dr. Chirag Vyas is an intrinsically motivated nuclear and radiochemist with over six years of extensive experience in radiochemical separations relevant for radionuclide production and applications. In his capacity as a Project Scientist, Chirag is determined to provide scientific, administrative, and technical know-how support for identifying and installing state of the art safety, research, and quality assurance related capabilities ensuring the strong potentials needed for prudent, holistic, and sustainable operation of the upcoming Department of Energy- Isotope Program's radiochemistry laboratory for the Isotope Harvesting Project at Facility of Rare Isotope Beams in Michigan State University.