

Dr. Hassan Abd El Rehim from Egypt holds a PhD in Chemistry from Ain Shams University, Professor of Radiation Chemistry at the National Research Centre, Egyptian Atomic Energy Authority. He held the position of Vice President of the Atomic Energy Authority for research projects. He has extensive experience in the development and applications of radiation technology in agriculture, industry, environment, and health as well as preservation of cultural heritage. He is involved in working with the International Energy Agency on related research and technical cooperation projects. He has many publications and research papers in these fields.