

Maria Diakaki is Assistant Professor at the National Technical University of Athens, Greece, working on experimental nuclear physics. Her main research area is the study of neutron induced reactions on various isotopes, including related detector development and nuclear data evaluation and phenomenological calculations.