

Aleksandr Bryazgin graduated in Novosibirsk State University as Physics Researcher in 1989. And then entered to Budker Institute of Nuclear Physics of Russian academy of sciences in Siberian division. He went through all the stages of work at the Institute from researcher to head of laboratory. The range of Alexander's interests in his work is the development and application of RF industrial electron accelerators of the ILU type.