

Electromagnetic Gyrokinetic Analysis of Turbulent Transport in Finite-Beta LHD Plasmas

- Shearing between oppositely inclined convection cells newly found in helical plasmas leads to saturation of the kinetic ballooning mode (KBM) which appears at finite beta.
- The efficiency of KBM turbulence in the transport is much smaller than that of ITG turbulence.

